and claim amounts. Insurers are committed to paying you, the policyholder, the least amount of money you will accept when you have a claim.

Any person over 18 years old that either owns a car or lives in an apartment, condo, or house buys insurance. Most people never read their policies. If they try to read them, they find them hard to understand. They trust their agent to sell them the right kind of insurance, and trust the insurance company to handle their claims for them.

But compare this. Would you allow the IRS to file your tax return for you? Would you expect them to find you every deduction possible?

As a result of ONLY ONE CLAIM with the WRONG COVERAGE, this trust can cost a policyholder hundreds of thousands of dollars, and completely change their life for the rest of their life.

People who have had a loss are on the raw edge of emotion. It is natural to be fearful in a situation where you don't feel you're in control...where you don't know what will happen next, and you're scared you'll be "ripped off." Most everyone has heard a story from a relative or friend about an insurance claim that went badly.

People need solid advice and a strategy on what to do to get their claim paid IN FULL.

They need to understand the claims process completely so that they are not at the mercy of the insurance company, the claims adjuster and the claims examiner.

They need to be paid every dollar that they are entitled to collect. They need to have peace of mind knowing that their claim was handled correctly.

Insurance companies rely upon the ignorance of their own policyholders. So do many claims adjusters. An uninformed policyholder will rarely argue with an adjuster, because they don't know how.

RUSSELL D. LONGCORE

Russell's crusade is to share valuable strategies with your audience that show them how to take control of their insurance policies and insurance claims, save hundreds on premium dollars, and collect hundreds or even thousands more dollars in their claim settlements!

Tim Ryles, PhD, Former Georgia Commissioner of Insurance says:
“This book is an easily readable, highly informative insider’s view of the claims process. Don’t file your next claim without reading it.”

Wouldn't you agree that nothing else matters about insurance other than getting the claim PAID IN FULL?

Insurance companies take in hundreds of billions of dollars in premium each year, and issue billions of dollars in claims payments. They want to make a profit, and do everything they can to hold down claim cost
